This 'Nene Shower with Wall Arm' from Drummonds is designed to be concealed in the wall, making it an ideal choice for a minimalist look

Architecture and interior design practice Waldo Works used a combination of eight different blue tiles from Victorian Ceramics, £360 a square metre, to sit under this impressive 30cm-diameter nickel shower head from Drummonds. The top half of each wall in the wet-room-style shower area has been protected with glass, and the glass and metal divider keeps the look slick. waldoworks.com | victorianceramics.com | drummonds-uk.com

This Twenties chandelier adds a subtle grandeur – try Vaughan for similar

Having enough storage in a bathroom can be a problem, so if space allows, choose a large, free-standing cabinet such as this one. The glass-fronted top half prevents the antique piece from looking too heavy in the space and any clutter can be stashed away in the bottom section. Try Lorfords for pretty antique cabinets and cupboards; it currently has in stock an eighteenth-century French painted cabinet for £2,350. lorfordsantiques.com

A collection of bathroom fixtures including a mirror, a vanity unit, a shower, and a bathtub. The mirror is circular and hangs from a rope. The vanity unit has a marble top and a metal frame. The shower is a tall, black, freestanding unit with a large showerhead. The bathtub is a classic clawfoot style with a white interior and a dark exterior.
