Master bathroom

A white colour scheme has been used in the master bathroom to help create a tranquil space, allowing the owners to hide away and relax after a long day at work. The traditional scheme is complemented by a freestanding Spey roll top bath from Drummonds.

THE designer

"The most important thing is to plan. Every room is different so you need to understand your space well. Natural light is very important as it will create the mood of the room."

Maurizio Pellizzoni, founder and director, Maurizio Pellizzoni Ltd

Why did you choose these styles?

Maurizio: "The idea behind the looks is tranquility. I wanted to create places for the owners and their guests to hide away and relax after a long day."

Tell us about the downstairs cloakroom?

Maurizio: "The main brief for the downstairs cloakroom, which sits adjacent to the formal sitting room, was to create a wow factor. I used rich colours and a gold wallpaper to give it a luxurious feel."

Were there any challenges?

Maurizio: "The homeowners own a large amount of furniture, artwork and accessories – some of which are priceless family heirlooms – and they were keen for these pieces to be part of the home. I had to incorporate them into each room so they appeared as though they really belonged."

Are you pleased with the result?

Maurizio: "I am extremely pleased – it was a very large project. Since it was completed the homeowners have been in touch to express their gratitude – they're really happy!"

Guest bathroom

Twin mahogany cabinets from Starbay stand at either side of the basin. The cabinets have been teamed with zebra-striped accessories to give the space a colonial vibe.
