Drummonds

It may take several weeks to produce the cast-iron Wandle bath by Martin Brudnizki for Drummonds, but it is well worth the wait. Ergonomically designed around the human form, the sloping end is the same width from top to bottom to accommodate shoulders and is set at the perfect angle to comfortably rest your head. Priced around £3750, Wandle is available with feet or a skirt (shown) in a polished finish. It can also be painted or primed to order.

Left: Morph Interior used walls to fool the eye into thinking that this bedroom and bathroom are a single space. For privacy, the WC is located elsewhere.

Below: Winning features of this central London ensuite designed by Waldo Works include the Hebden basin vanity with a black Marquina marble top, £3300, and Nene shower with wall arm and 300mm shower rose in nickel, £2664, both from Drummonds. The metal-framed shower doors lend an air of urban chic and contrast with the hand-glazed period-style tiles.

Opposite page, top left: Three tile formats in natural tones are used to delineate the dry and wet zones and provide contrast in this bathroom by Sonnemann Toon Architects. The wide basin and wall-mounted WC pan are from Duravit. Bespoke heated mirror cabinets sit above the Silestone shelf and incorporate concealed lighting above and below, giving a soft glow. Price on application.

Right: The bath panel in this ensuite by Simon Taylor Furniture was included to give the client space to rest a glass or some bath products on, while the bath itself has wall-mounted taps and a thermostatic bath filler. Bespoke elements in the room include the hand-painted finish on the bath and American black walnut vanity cabinets. A similar bathroom would cost between £30,000 and £35,000.

Below: No expense was spared in this ensuite by Originate. It features walls and floors covered in Calacatta marble, and even the basin pedestal is clad in marble for a bespoke look. Contact Originate for more details.
