TAKE IT TO THE MAX

Colour in the bathroom has spent too long being confined to accessories and the odd sanitary ware line. But change is afoot. From fearless hue combinations and in-your-face patterns, designers are challenging the norm and exploring the infinite possibilities of maximalism. To master this trend, confidence is crucial – it must be embraced wholeheartedly or not at all. Indulge in shades that bring you the most joy and patterns that speak to your personality. Break all the style rules, except one – try not to suffocate the space. You can achieve this by introducing white areas into your scheme that will offer a dash of light relief.

Project details Honour your home's historic heritage, but prevent it from looking staid by bringing together the past and the present. Here, on-trend maximalist wallpaper is the ultimate modern counterpoint to Drummonds's classic Thurso shower, from £22,740. It features a spacious, cast-iron shower tray, with a curved skirt designed to echo the roll top seen on many of the brand's baths. The freestanding shower makes a bold centrepiece in a large bathroom. This is L'Eden wallpaper by de Gournay, from £1,972 for a panel. On request, the company will apply a protective glaze to L'Eden for use in your bathroom.
